HOME TALENT NEXT MOKENA EVENT

MOKENA HOME COMING WAS A BIG SUCCESS

Even tho the weather man turned on a polar region brand of weather, the first home coming and harvest festival ever held in Mokena and which was sponsored by the aggressive Mokena Civic Association last Friday and Saturday was a whole of enough money to pay all expenses and still leave a profit.

The support given the festival was most wonderful and the Association certainly deeply appreciates the very whole hearted support given the undertaking and also the fine cooperation shown by every one connected with the affair.

For two nights the lower section of Mokena's Front street from the Rock Island depot grounds west to the Wannemacher store, had the appearance of a replica of the famed great white way of New York City with its many bright and colored lights.

A sound truck was in constant use for announcements, music, etc. The Mokena band was heard in concert each evening.

The hot dog and hamburger stand did a land office business for two nights.

That Christmas is not far off was brought to mind by a rather Yuletide scene by way of a tree at the Garden Club bower being decorated with gaily colored lights. This tree had the appearance of a big Christmas tree.

Saturday afternoon a big feature was a decorated bicycle parade. A hay rack gaily decorated to represent the days of long ago drawn by a team driven by Walter McGovney, a pioneer resident of Mokena and bearing the sign "Spirit of 1832" made a big hit.

Frankfort Girl A Charming Autumn Bride

St. Peter's Evangelical and Reformed Church in Frankfort was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Sunday, October 24 when Miss Ruth Nieland, daughter of Mrs. Bertha Nieland of Frankfort became the bride of Mr. Burnett Schram son of Mrs. Margaret Schram.

The church was decorated with flowers of all kinds and colors. Preceding the ceremony Mrs. Ray Osamus of New Lenox, aunt of the bride sang "Oh Promise Me" and "I Love You Truly".

Promptly at four o'clock, Miss Edith Wischover played the wedding march. The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Ralph, who was celebrating his eighteenth birthday.

The bride was attired in white satin, wore a veil and carried a bouquet of white roses and chrysanthemums.

The bride was attended by her sister Mae Nieland, as bridesmaid. The latter was gowned in a light blue taffeta with dark blue trimmings. She wore gold accessories and carried gold chrysanthemums.

Gene Bennett, cousin of the bride, was the ring bearer. He was clad in a white suit, carrying a white satin pillow.

David Hennessy, cousin of the groom, was the best man.

The ushers were Grant Geuther, a cousin of the bride, and Lester Barton, brother of the groom.

Rev. G. S. Gerhold performed the double ring ceremony.

A reception was given in the church parlors to the immediate family. A large wedding cake and flowers of blue and white decorated the bridal table.

The couple enjoyed a short wedding trip. The bride traveled in a green suit with brown accessories.

The couple will be at home to their friends after Nov. 1 in the Pfaff flat above the barbershop where Mr. Schram is employed. Mrs. Schram is now employed in the Frankfort post office.

Mokena PTA Notes

Did you attend the PTA meeting Tuesday night? If not you missed a few hours of enjoyment as the book review Mrs. Hayes Robinson gave, "The Horse and Buggy Doctor" by Arthur E. Hertzberg was certainly very interesting and anyone hearing it would want to read the book.

Mrs. Hayes Robinson is a most interesting speaker. She read some of the most descriptive parts and told of many other different happenings in the book. It is the story of a doctor who started practicing about 40 years ago and the comparison of medicine and surgery then and now make the book.

Mr. Dunn made a motion to give ten dollars to each of the grade school rooms for new books for the reading circles. Mrs. R. Krapp seconded the motion. The PTA voted in favor of buying books.

Mrs. McGuire, chairman of the Red Cross in Mokena, spoke about the work for this year. The committee is going to organize a junior Red Cross so that each child can have a part in it.

We would like to organize a class in "Home Care of the Sick" in charge of a Red cross worker, also a class in "First Aid." All those interested in joining these classes please notify Mrs. McGuire, Mrs. Neithammer or Mrs. Semmler.

The Home care of Sick is a twelve week course. It would consist of one lesson a week of one hour each.

The First Aid course would be 1 two hour lessons each week for ten weeks.

Please notify Mrs. McGuire as possible so that these classes can be started.

After the meeting a social hour and refreshments were enjoyed by all.

Patriotism does not consist in waving banners, or wearing uniforms, or belonging to societies, or denouncing other lands, or waxing eloquent about God's own country. It consists rather in exemplifying in the twentieth century, the ancient truth that "righteousness exalteth a nation: but sin is a reproach to any people."

Campaign Pledges—And Their Value

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

Again America is experiencing one of its periodical deluges of high-pressure salesmanship.

In this instance the salesmen are the candidates for elective office, and the prospective customers are the voters—in other words, "We, the People."

What does the political salesman who wins our attention have in stock—sound goods or shoddy? On our willingness and ability to decide correctly depends—now, as in every election—the well-being and progress of both our people and our nation.

Does he make pledges that are impossible of fulfillment—and that he, himself, knows cannot be redeemed?

Does he promise to fill every voter's pockets with money far beyond the ability of the nation to supply?

Does he picture economic and political mirages that dissolve under the searchlight of realism?

If so, his proffered goods are fraudulent, and he is attempting to obtain votes under false pretenses—as serious a matter as obtaining money under false pretenses.

Or does the candidate offer what the people have a right to expect from him?

Does he outline clearly his knowledge, his experience, his reputation, his character; and, eschewing the promise of glittering miracles, explain clearly just what he plans to do for us, and how he plans to do it?

Does he avoid the campaign pledge which is incapable of redemption, because, like unsound currency which cannot be redeemed, it betrays both trust and friendship?

Does he withstand the temptation to ignore the welfare of the people as a whole by pleading to greedy groups or noisy factions to elect him as their exclusive agent and champion?

These are less alluring offers. But for the people who choose—and pay—our public officials, they hold by far the greater value. And they represent the things that our country needs.

The choice—as always—is in our hands.

Bugle Calls

By Zeb Potter

Now that the Mokena Home Coming and Harvest Festival has past let's give three cheers for the organization that backed this successful event, The Mokena Civic Association.

The first week in November, an amateur show will be sponsored by the Mokena Band Parents Association. Come one, come all.

Events like these, we need. Old age is creeping on, and it gives a fellow a chance to get out and rub elbows with old friends and neighbors. The younger folks appreciate having you come to their entertainments.

In St. Paul, Minn., some years ago, a chief of police had a happy idea, or did he? He was willing to sell out his town to criminals. From near and far bank robbers, kidnapers, and their like used St. Paul as a hide-out. His stipulation to them; that crime was out while there.

Fences, places for disposing stolen goods, flourished. G men on the lookout for criminals came to St. Paul first. Dillinger shot his way out of a police trap in that town.

The decent and respectable citizens of the town were finally aroused. It was, however, a hard task to break the alliance between crime and the police.

A newspaper man with the aid of ex G men from Washington broke up the ring. An expert investigator tapped telephone conversations. On the front page of the paper appeared daily the incriminating talk between the police officials and the hoodlums.

Public opinion was aroused. The crooks were thrown out of office and today St. Paul has one of the lowest crime rates of the larger cities in the country.

It takes time to stir up the wrath of the decent law abiding citizens of a town, then look out.

Leaves rustle in the wind. Smoke curls upward from chimney tops. Children with sweaters play in the streets. Men with top coats hurry along. Fall is here. Summer is gone with its pleasant memories.

On the newsstands appear hundreds of magazines devoted to the idea of self improvement. How to be charming, how to make people like you, how to get what you want. These articles have the appeal of self interest in them. The person wanting to get ahead reads them eagerly.

A good rule on self improvement is this whatever we get in life comes from the hands of the other fellow. The job of our personality is to attract rather than repel people. Use a smile more often than a frown. Try it and see how it works.

The man who ruled Czechoslovakia is coming to Chicago. Mr. Hitler the big boss of Europe, didn't like him. Welcome Mr. Benes to this country. We hope you will like us. We also hope we can keep this country a democracy so that Mr. Hitler won't have to come over to run the show for us.

That's all this week. Zeb Potter.

CARE IS REQUIRED IN STORING CORN FOR 1938 AAA LOAN

Corn must be carefully cribbed this fall if it is to come within the grade requirements for obtaining a corn loan under the AAA farm program, according to Byron Gaskill, Chairman of the Will county agricultural conservation committee.

Many farmers get in a hurry to pick their corn and put it into the crib when the moisture content is too high, Mr. Gaskill said. Permitting corn to dry a little longer in the field now may mean the difference between getting the loan and not getting it.

Care in putting the corn into the crib may also be a help in meeting requirements for a loan. Also, it may be advisable to put a few ventilators in the crib to help take off the moisture.

If a loan is desired, 1938 corn can not be mixed with 1937 corn. A partition must be used to keep the corn separate if a loan is desired on the 1938 crop.

A 28-page circular, "Corn Storage in the Ever-Normal Granary," describes methods of storing corn that are satisfactory under the AAA loan program. Copies of the circular may be obtained by writing the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois.

CHICAGO STOCK SHOW TO OPEN NEXT MONTH.

Heading the schedule of events on Chicago's fall calendar is the International Live Stock Exposition and Horse Show, which will be held here this year November 26 to December 3.

Stockmen and farmers from many states and Canada have already sent entries for live stock and crops they will exhibit this year in the competitions of this largest of the continent's live stock shows. Cash prizes will total over $100,000 in contests featuring 30 different breeds of horses, cattle, sheep and swine.

Ever since the first International show in 1900, the exposition has opened on the first Saturday after Thanksgiving, a calendar position that has made it both the close and climax of the continent's agricultural fair season.

Since a majority of the herds and flocks that are exhibited at the Chicago exposition have been prize winners at county and state fairs and sectional expositions, held earlier in the year throughout this country and Canada, the International Live Stock Show has long stood as a court of last resort, where winning animals are accorded the highest honor that the show ring can bestow.

The exposition will be held in the new International Amphitheatre at the east entrance to the Chicago Stock Yards. The building covers six acres of exhibit area and was built to meet the special needs of the show after which it is named.

This year will mark the 20th anniversary of the International Grain and Hay Show, a department of the live stock exposition. The crops show is the largest competitive exhibition of its kind in the world, and farmers from nearly every state in the Union and province of Canada are expected to take part in this event this year.

According to B. H. Heide, the show's secretary-manager, the crops is the largest in its history, and plans are being made to receive approximately 14,000 head of live stock at the 1938 exposition.

The State Constitution is the Peoples' Law. They establish it by direct vote and only they can change it. When a provision ceases to serve the public interests it should be changed.

Illinois banking laws are out of date. The National Banking Act and the Banking Acts of our neighbor States have been revised to meet new conditions. Our banking laws must be brought up to date.

The proposed Constitutional Amendment will remove the double liability of stockholders of our State Banks. It has been removed from National Bank stock and from State Bank stock in 39 states.

The proposed Constitutional Amendment will remove the requirement of referendum on banking legislation and enable our General Assembly to modernize our State Banking Act promptly.

Mokena Civic

Asso., Home Coming Success

The Mokena Civic Association was very much gratified by the cooperation of those who brought exhibits to the Mokena Home-Coming and Fall Festival last Friday and Saturday. These exhibits were uniformly good and of interest to all.

So many things came in that not enough ribbons were on hand to be able to attach one to each prize winning exhibit. Those who did not receive their ribbons at the Home-Coming, will do so as soon as they can be made and distributed.

Awards were made as follows:
Farm and Garden Produce: Most uniform ten ears of corn, H. Bormet, Blue Ribbon; Herb, Cooper, Red. Mammoth Beans, J. Schenkel, Blue. Pumpkins, Dorothy Kohl, Blue, F. Hentscher, Red. Yellow Squash, Stanger Bros., Blue. Red Beets, Mrs. Hostert, Blue, Mrs. A. Benson, Red. Pears, John Mattes, Blue, Joe Lehnert, Red. Eggplant, Stanger Bros., Blue. Parsnips, Mr. Beagley, Blue. ART EXHIBITS
These were all the work of two people, Miss Alice Lauffer and Mr. Emil Borges. Blue ribbons go to each, not for any one of the fine pieces shown by them, but for the interesting and artistic display each was able to make in their chosen field.

HANDICRAFTS
Mr. Fred Rauch displayed a fine hand made blue woolen shawl.
PTA AND SCHOOL EXHIBITS
Those who saw these exhibits will appreciate their interest and instruction. Description here can give no adequate idea of the uniformly careful and neat workmanship of the children whose work was shown. Many things equally as good could not be shown for lack of space.

Much credit is due the teachers whose instruction made this work possible and the PTA committee members whose work made the display possible.

HISTORICAL EXHIBITS
Photographs, posters, a gun and other utensils of historical interest were displayed by Mrs. Barney Hostert and Mr. Herbert Cooper. They drew the attention of many.

FLOWER EXHIBITS
The strong wind we "enjoyed" made it impossible to display properly the glorious flowers of many colors which had been so nicely arranged for by many ladies. Many blue and red ribbons were awarded these displays, but the modesty of some of the donors prevented a full knowledge of names.

Mrs. A. Benson, Mrs. Herman Schweser and Miss Emma Klose were among those who received ribbons. Among these exhibits was a large and interesting cotton plant, showing cotton in each stage from the bud to the ripening boll. Many people had never seen this plant before.

OTHER DISPLAYS
The Dept. of Agriculture, U. S. A. had an interesting exhibit with many pamphlets for free distribution. The Rock Island showed picture of one of its new Rocket tickets.

GARDEN CLUB
The Garden Club, in its bower of bloom and beauty, had several interesting compositions and oddities. Their displays had a purpose, that of awakening our townspeople to the many opportunities for making our local bare spots more sightly. The suggestions they made are worthy of general support.

The pledge of a man of character to "enforce the laws impartially, fearlessly, courteously, efficiently" is the simple politics of the campaign of Emmett McGuire, Democratic candidate for sheriff of Will County. He stands on his reputation in public office and private business for clean and honest dealings with the people of his own city and county.

It is indeed no wonder that he has the endorsement of the outstanding leaders of community betterment including those engaged in all fields of endeavor. Without prejudice towards any other candidate, without malice towards anyone, Emmett McGuire asks the support of the right thinking people to the end that he may serve the county in a larger field, bringing it better law enforcement and sincere effort at crime prevention and an economical administration. His only claim, based on his record, is that he honestly believes that he can be a better sheriff.

"Let's all vote for Emmett McGuire" has become a slogan throughout Will County.

Ham and Eggs From Slot Machines: New Pension Wave Sweeps U. S.

November Election Brings Big Crop of Old Age Assistance Plans, Promising Congressional Debate on 'Little' Townsend Bill

By JOSEPH W. LABINE

Someone long since established that a man can't pull himself up by his bootstraps, but that does not stop several million aging Americans from clamoring for three square meals a day.

This means that America is again besieged with a deluge of pension plans, economically unorthodox but capable of drawing a huge vote at the November 8 election.

Pension plans have a way of blossoming out each time there's a depression. It happened in 1934, a la Dr. Frances E. Townsend. At the rate it's happening again this year, the 1938 depression is a world beater.

On November 8 the residents of at least 16 states will vote yes or no on old age pensions to be supported by everything from slot machines to dog races. For each of these plans there's a black and white solution that looks good on paper but leaves the economists a little skeptical. You can prove any of them will or won't work.

No enlightened American denies that the pension idea is economically sound provided it can be financed. Under a modern social order it is logical that youth should work and age should rest. But wizened observers are hoping this year's crop of Utopian ideas will die out, that instead next winter's congress will arrange a sensible substitute.

Townsendism Again

But Townsendism is the most favored substitute, and how sensible is Townsendism? At least 100 congressmen are behind the modified version of this plan which calls for monthly $50 payments to old people, financed by a gross 2 per cent transaction tax. This bill is sponsored by Wisconsin's Rep. Gerald Boileau. Business, already taxed to the hilt, complains that a 2 per cent levy would remove what little profit now remains from commercial transactions.

But the pensioners must be satisfied, or stamped out. Thus far they've shoved from office such prominent men as California's Sen. William Gibbs McAdoo, defeated in the primary by Sheridan Downey, who rode the crest of a new pension wave. Downeyism advocates the scrip plan, despite the failure of scrip in Alberta a couple of years ago. Thirty dollars in scrip would be issued each Thursday to every Californian over 60 years old. To pay for it, a two cent state stamp, bought with real money, would be pasted each Thursday on the back of each $1 piece of scrip in circulation. At the end of a year the scrip would carry $1.04 in stamps and would be redeemed for $1.00 in cash.

Downeyism has spread to other states, notably Ohio, where the chief arguments center around payday. Shall it be Wednesday or Thursday? Ohio's rival petitioners have thus far failed to provide financial machinery. As in California, the battle cry is for "ham and eggs."

A group of Nebraskans hope ham and eggs will come from slot machines, for on November 8 that state will vote on an amendment "relating to public assistance, welfare and social security; to provide revenue for the state assistance fund from the proceeds of an annual tax to be levied on owners and operators of coin-operated devices." Mysteriously sponsored and cleverly phrased, the Nebraska petition was probably signed by many people who didn't realize that the tax would be on slot machines instead of plain vending machines. The resultant complaint has changed the amendment to read "machines of chance."

Oregon to the Rescue

Oregon has two petitions, one memorializing congress to call a national convention for a constitutional amendment establishing the Boileau bill. The other calls for a 2 per cent transaction tax to give old people $100 a month. North Dakota is voting on an amendment to pay $40 a month to all people over 65, including the $15 federal aid. The state has thus far been unable to raise money for its half of the present $30 pension.

Arkansas would support its $50 a month pension with present sales taxes and fees from dog and horse races, slot machines and pool rooms. Oklahoma may try the same method, while Washington seeks merely to establish the principle of pensions. In Georgia, Tennessee, North Carolina and Texas, candidates are running on pension platforms.

In contrast to this mad race for old age assistance is Colorado's attempt to repeal its constitutional amendment adopted in 1936, calling for a $45 monthly payment to all needy people over 60. Sponsors of the repealer petition claim the pension has ruined state finances, pointing out that the "guaranteed" $45 a month has never been more than $25. Pensioners argue that economy would produce the full pension.

LEFT—L. K. Adams of Kansas City, Kan., would give $25 each Tuesday to every Kansan more than 55 years old, and $2.50 for every dependent legitimate child. RIGHT—Roy C. Wallace, independent candidate for governor in Tennessee, proposes $20 a week to all Tennesseans more than 50 years old.

Conservative Support

But the 1938 variety of pensioner is not always a fanatic. In Idaho the level-headed Sen. William E. Borah has announced himself as not unfriendly to old age assistance movements. In Maine three Republican congressmen elected with Townsend help have pledged their support to the full $200-a-month pension. Massachusetts Republicans recommend early congressional action on the Boileau measure.

These campaign promises foreshadow a heated battle in congress next winter, but they may also foreshadow adoption of many state pension plans on November 8. Through the entire campaign, the national administration has maintained a hands-off policy, feeling that if Colorado's sad experience hasn't taught people a lesson, they can find out for themselves. After all, every state has a right to try.

Cornhusking Now Simon-Pure Just Like Any Other Sport!

Pros Get Cold Shoulder In 'Purified' Bang-Board Contest

You're invited to compete in the national cornhusking contest at Sioux Falls, S. D., November 3, but be sure of your amateur status!

Professionalism, long the bogus of golfers, tennis players and football stars, has at last raised its ugly head on the farm, making husking quite a simon-pure business.

To be eligible for this year's contest, says a resolution of the National Cornhusking Contest association, you must not have "participated for money or other awards or gifts in any cornhusking contest sponsored or approved by an organization or group other than the organizations which are members of this association."

The new ruling was made public just in time to save William Rose, 1937 Illinois champion, from selling his soul for pieces of silver. Rose, who can shuck 175 bushels of corn a day if he sets his heart to it, no sooner entered a free-for-all contest at Barry, Ill., then the state contest sponsor stepped in with a warning.

When this year's strictly amateur cornhuskers step into the field near Sioux Falls, they will have an audience of probably 50,000 fans. Contestants will come from every state in the corn belt, chosen by elimination husking bees. So popular has the sport become that it pushes football off the sports page for one day each autumn and attracts national network broadcasts.

Contest fields are chosen in early summer and tilled carefully to insure a good stand of corn. Shuckers, who have trained like athletes for the 80 minute grind, line up in sprint formation between rows of corn. Each wears a palm hook with which he tears off the ears, ripping off the husks and throwing them at an accompanying wagon. The wagon carries a "bang board" which rebounds the ears into the bin.

The husker who gets the most corn in his wagon during the 80-minute run is usually the winner, but judges trail each contestant in search of abandoned ears. Every ear that's been left behind counts as an error, so the scales don't always give the final verdict.

Unlike some "sissy" sports, a corn husking contest is never called off on account of bad weather. Last year's event was run off in a driving rain with huskers wallowing in slippery mud between the rows. This year it may be dry, with dusk whipping up from the parched corn stalks.

Seasoned huskers look on football players as softies. During the entire 80-minute race they never take time out for rest, occasionally gulping a drink of water on the run.

HOW to SEW

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

ANOTHER letter today from a reader who says she has made so many things from the books offered herewith that she has almost worn them out, but would like more information about rag rugs. So here is the answer to her question about making flower designs.

Use a wax crayon or soft pencil to mark the pattern on a 51 by 33-inch piece of burlap. Then divide the rest into 9-inch squares. Now, mark every other one of these big squares into small squares to be hooked in mixed stripes.

We are now ready for the flowers; here are ten posies of the type that grandmother drew. No. 1: just two circles. No. 2: A spiral outline with a circle around it makes a rose. No. 3: a spiral with four petals. Sometimes more petals were used. Nos. 4 and 5: a circle or an oval with five petals becomes a wild rose. Nos. 6 and 7: one oval inside another with a triangle added becomes the morning glory type of flower. Nos. 8 and 9: draw a big U and add petals at the top. No. 10: another kind of trumpet flower drawn with straight lines.

Tan is a good background color for the flower squares. Rags or rug yarn may be used. A rug hook, which is like a big steel crochet hook with a wooden handle, may be purchased in fancy work departments. Just pull loops of the yarn or rag strips through to the right side of the burlap with this hook.

With the help of Mrs. Spears' Book 1—SEWING, for the Home Decorator—you can make many of the things you have been wanting for your house. Book 2—Embroidery and Gifts—is full of ideas for ways to use your spare time in making things for yourself and to sell. Books are 25 cents each. If you order both books quilt leaflet illustrating 36 authentic stitches is included free. Address: Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

German interests in this country fight for reciprocal trade agreement with Germany... Congress expected to approve of greatly increased appropriations for preparedness... It seems the agricultural problem is likely to be with us for many years to come... the cotton problem also presents its difficulties.

WASHINGTON.—Desperate efforts are being made by important German interests in this country, and some not interested through national ties but because of economic ideas, to have this country enter into a reciprocal trade agreement with Germany.

Because of the bitter feeling among so large a part of the population of this country against Hitler, and because of the disinclination of Secretary of State Cordell Hull, daddy of the reciprocal trade treaty formula for maintaining world peace, there is plenty of tenseness in the situation. All sorts of wires are being pulled by both sides, and the outcome is shrouded in doubt.

Those arguing for the German treaty all use the same contentions, though the two groups are motivated by entirely different springs. Most vociferous of course, are the Germans who actually sympathize with Hitler. There are a lot of them, little as the casual newspaper reader might suspect it. Because they do not wish to penalize themselves by running publicly counter to the anger of Jewish and Catholic haters of Der Fuehrer, most of them are not making much noise about it. But they are very active, as every official in the State department has good cause to know.

There is a considerable number of business men who believe in making a profit through trade, even if they trade with the devil, which is not surprising but merely what has been happening since the beginning of time. Then there is a very small group of important persons who sincerely believe that the path to world peace and permanence of freedom from war depends chiefly on trade—and not just bilateral trade either, but world-wide trade.

Lower Trade Barriers As Preventive of War

The arguments of this little group are used by both the larger ones—those who desire to see Germany made stronger and who glory in Hitler's "redemption" of the Fatherland from the "strait-jacket" of the Versailles treaty, and those who hope for a personal profit.

Naturally, because Cordell Hull has been preaching the lowering of trade barriers as the best preventive of war for low these many years, both the larger groups realize the arguments of the little group of intellectuals are the ones most likely to be potent. Incidentally, also, both the larger groups are perfectly sincere in agreeing with these arguments.

Those who want to make a profit themselves by trading more with Germany naturally are convinced that the whole world will be more prosperous as a result. There is no hypocrisy in this. Nearly every business man the world over is convinced that if something were done to improve his particular line of business everybody in the entire world would be better off.

It's a fight, and it's going to be worth watching, though unfortunately for the audience most of the moves are not going to be played in the open.

Increased Appropriations For Preparedness Assured

Tremendously increased appropriations are assured from the next congress for all kinds of preparedness—army ordnance, airplanes, cargo ships, fighting ships, tanks, motorized equipment—everything conceivable that would be needed in wartime.

There is an extraordinary unanimity of sentiment about this on Capitol Hill. President Roosevelt will have no trouble getting all the money he may ask for the army, navy, marine corps, cargo ship construction, and for readying private plants so that they could turn out war equipment at short notice. For instance, the little matter of educational orders is indicative of the general line of thought.

For years Britain has followed this practice of educational orders. The underlying idea is to have as many factories and plants as possible ready to turn to government work in time of emergency with no delay. Getting ready to produce many types of military equipment is a long, tedious process. It involves getting the proper jigs and dies. It involves training men to do an entirely new job.

In an ordinary government contract, given to a private manufacturer, the government of course calls for bids and gives the work to the bidder offering to produce at the lowest price, assuming of course that the bidder is demonstrably reliable.

But in educational orders the plan is exactly the reverse. The object is different. If what is wanted immediately is 1,000 machine guns, for instance, normally the manufacturer offering to produce them at the lowest price would get the contract. But under the educational order system the government's purpose would best be served by giving 20 different manufacturers each a contract for 50 machine guns.

Expansion Not Difficult Where Needs Are Known

Then, if war or an emergency should develop three months later, there would be 20 manufacturers who had found out how to make the type of machine guns desired. Expansion is not difficult where the exact needs are familiar, and the workers know how to do the job. Each worker, for example, can be put to training others.

But despite the obvious military advantage of this system of educational orders, not until right now has the United States government ever employed it. And this although the plan has been advocated for 10 years and its good results in Britain have been well known.

Agricultural Problem Stumps Would-Be Solvers

A very shrewd Kansan recently in Washington remarked that the farm problem would be with us, unsolved, 40 years hence. About a week later, in a speech at Hutchinson, Kan., Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace said that one who had been watching the wheat market over a period of years would not be surprised at the fact that the price had gone down. It was sure to come, he said, with a return of "normal weather."

But a couple of days later the report of the Great Plains committee was made, predicting that continuing of grain growing in the Dakotas, eastern Montana and northern Nebraska is futile, and that the farmers are doomed to defeat and despair if they keep on trying.

And meantime comes a report from North Carolina that there is too much hay, due to the soil erosion policy of the department of agriculture. Which means, of course, that in the next few years North Carolina's production of cattle is going to leap skyward, as it is impractical to use the hay in any other way. There will be no turning from hay, either, for the soil-erosion payments by the government to farmers guarantee its continuance.

All of which, put together, gives an idea of what the would-be solvers of the agricultural problem are up against. For obviously this present surplus of wheat was produced without much help from the section studied by the Great Plains committee. And just as obviously, without much help from North Carolina. Now if the Dakotas and other parts of this Great Plains area turn to grass, and hence to cattle, it would seem as though by the time both the Northwest and the Carolina sections got down to cattle production in a big way there will be an overproduction of cattle as well as a surplus of wheat.

Cotton Problem Also Is Full of Difficulties

Then there is the cotton problem. It is the settled conviction of many shrewd observers that the Old South, east of the Mississippi, will not remain very much longer in the cotton growing game. It simply will not pay, unless the government is willing to pay a perfectly enormous subsidy in addition to the already huge farm subsidies being paid.

And this, observers agree, is because the government held up the price of cotton artificially in the first few years of the Roosevelt administration. For many decades the whole world has been looking for another cotton-growing area, or else a substitute for cotton, in order to avoid paying the hundreds of millions of dollars sent to the South.

Until just recently the rest of the world had no luck. Often a new area was discovered which would grow cotton, but always either the cotton was of an inferior quality or else was too expensive for economic production.

Lesson for October 30

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND WHERE THEY END

LESSON TEXT—Ecclesiastes 2:1-3, 10, 11; Romans 6:17-23; 14:21.
GOLDEN TEXT—What shall we say then? Shall we continue in sin, that grace may abound?—Romans 6:15.

"Personal liberty"—what endless misuse was made of that expression in the days when men seeking the right to again flood this country with intoxicating liquors were attacking prohibition. One would think that some of our political leaders and our newspaper editors would blush for shame when they see what has now been accomplished in the name of personal liberty.

My liberty ends, as someone has well said, where yours begins. I have the personal liberty to swing my arms as far as the tip of your nose, but there my liberty ends. All of life is, and necessarily must be built on that principle. For the Christian there is an even higher measure of responsibility—his relationship to God and his consequent heart interest in the welfare of his fellow men.

Our Scripture portions for today present a sharp contrast. Man without God, but with every earthly advantage is pictured in Ecclesiastes in his fruitless search for real joy. Then man as the glad bondslave of Jesus Christ is spoken of in Romans as truly free and joyful.

I. The Way of Emptiness and Disappointment (Eccles. 2:1-3, 10, 11).

1. Physical pleasures do not satisfy (Eccles. 2:1-3). Men who have tasted the distress and disappointment of life are prone to think that if they only had all the money they wanted, and an opportunity to partake of life's "thrills" they would be happy. Solomon had everything. He deliberately set himself to prove the pleasures of this world. He planned to "enjoy" intoxicants—doing it "with wisdom"—that is, not in a drunken debauch that would bring remorse. Note it, you who advocate the moderate use of alcohol (whatever that may be) Solomon found it to be only vain emptiness. (See Prov. 23:31, 32.)

What is true of wine is also true of the attempt to satisfy oneself by the gratification of any physical appetite. Those who live for the pleasures of the flesh can reap only corruption (Gal. 6:8). The hectic search for such satisfaction by countless men and women today reveals that they, like Solomon, cannot find it. If they did, they would cease their wild searching. It just is not there.

2. Pleasures of the mind do not satisfy (Eccles. 2:10, 11). Solomon sought real joy in labor, in accomplishing worthy ends. There is a satisfaction in work well done, but that joy is only lasting when the doing of the work is for the glory of God. Work for its own sake—yes, even wisdom for its own sake (Eccles. 1:12-18)—is not enough to satisfy the soul of man. The great poet Goethe, who set himself to enjoy the higher pleasures of life—art, science, and literature—came to his seventy-fifth year to testify that he had "never had four weeks of genuine pleasure." Satisfaction is not in the pleasures of the aesthetic nature.

II. The Way of Victory, Peace, and True Joy (Rom. 6:17-23; 14:21).

We say with Paul "God be thanked" that there is a way for men to find freedom from the sin and disappointment of life. It comes by

1. Personal allegiance to God (Rom. 6:17-23). Clear thinking on spiritual matters recognizes that the man who boasts of his personal liberty, his freedom from God's control over his life is in reality the slave of sin (vv. 17-19; Titus 2:3). On the other hand, the one who is a willing bondslave of Jesus Christ is free. The way of victory and peace is to yield to God, even as the way of defeat and disappointment is to yield to sin. The first way leads to joy in this life and eternal fellowship with God. The other way results in ultimate ghastly disillusionment in this life and eternal spiritual death and separation from God.

2. Recognized responsibility for others (Rom. 14:21). It should not take two minutes of intelligent consideration for any man to understand that "none of us liveth to himself and no man dieth to himself" (Rom. 14:7). Yet that is the obvious assumption under which men live, leaving behind them not only their own wrecked lives, but carrying along in the stream of their personal influence their acquaintances, friends and members of their families.

The principle stated in Romans 14:21 should govern all of our actions. Paul was speaking of meat offered to idols, which he could have eaten with a clear conscience. But if he ate it someone else would be caused to stumble, and he was rather willing to do without it as long as he lived. One wonders what would happen in the Christian world if every professed follower of Christ would thus evaluate not only the use of intoxicants but also his every personal habit.

WHAT to EAT and WHY

C. Houston Goudiss Describes Correct Diet for Cool Weather; Explains How to Keep Warm and Well

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

MANY people look upon fall weather with foreboding. They cannot observe leaves on the ground without a feeling of vague uneasiness—and the sight of brown and barren fields fills them with desolation.

This, I think, is a throwback to an earlier day when the advent of cool weather foretold long months of bitterly cold days in draughty, inadequately heated houses. And the lack of adequate heat was only one of many difficulties. The principal reason for fearing cold weather is another heritage from the past.

Limited Diet of an Earlier Day

There was a time within memory of many of us when the terms "cold-weather diet" and "warm-weather diet" had real meaning. Winter food differed a great deal from summer food, particularly in the absence of fresh fruits and vegetables, and in the restricted use of milk, and milk products.

The limited diet of winter was enforced by conditions of that period. Methods of production, transportation, refrigeration and storage of foods, which are commonplace today, were then unknown.

Fruits and vegetables were consumed when and where they were grown, and when cold weather prevented their growth, they were not available. The canning industry was young and the grocery store in cold weather presented a far different appearance from the modern food store in which the shelves are lined, row upon row, with shining cans of the finest fruits and vegetables to be found anywhere in the world, plus an amazing assortment of prepared milks.

It was an accepted fact that fruits, vegetables, and the generous use of milk belonged to the summer months, while in winter everyone ate an unbalanced diet. As a result of lacking these essential protective foods, health went down rapidly from late fall to early spring.

The winter diet was deficient in minerals and vitamins, which science has proven to be the protectors of health, barriers against disease, sustainers of life. But in those days, vitamins were unknown and very little had been learned about minerals. Therefore, when people became ill during cold weather, the natural conclusion was that sickness was inevitable during the winter season.

Cold Weather Really a Tonic

Times have changed. Scientific knowledge has increased. The genius of man has asserted itself in mechanical advancement. The expressions, "cold-weather diet" and "warm-weather diet," have lost their former meaning.

Almost without exception, the protective foods are available throughout the year, no matter where we live.

It is therefore possible to protect the health by a balanced diet all the year 'round, and to benefit by the tonic effect of cold weather. For, contrary to popular belief, cold weather is beneficial, and not harmful, to healthy people.

Cold speeds up all the activities of the body. The circulation is improved, muscle tone is increased, and digestion, absorption and elimination are stimulated. Even prolonged cold is thus a tonic to health, provided we do not weaken our bodies by an unbalanced diet.

It is partly because so many people continue to eat improperly, in spite of our newer knowledge of nutrition, that we still find an increasing amount of sickness in the fall, which mounts steadily until it reaches its peak in the months of January, February and March.

Dangers of an Improper Diet

Yet winter need have no terrors for the fit. Only the weak, the unfit, surrender and become its victims. That the number of victims is large each winter merely indicates how many people neglect their health through careless living, and especially through careless eating.

Measures to protect one's self against the attack of winter should be taken during the summer and early fall. A sturdy resistance against the ills of winter should be built up by means of a balanced diet which assures an abundant supply of the minerals and vitamins.

When a person is undernourished or improperly nourished, he is denied of every defense. He is chilled by the slightest drop in temperature. He offers fertile soil for every kind of disease germs. He can neither resist their invasion, nor fight them off after they have attacked.

Thus, the first rule for keeping warm and well in winter is to live and eat in a manner that helps to maintain health and strength. The correct winter diet differs in one important respect—and one only—from the correct diet at other seasons.

More Fuel Foods Required

As a rule, people are more energetic in cold weather and it is therefore necessary to increase the amount of energy-producing foods. Nearly all children, and adults who spend much of their time out doors, should consume more high caloric foods which

Your Health May Depend on Your Teeth

An Editorial by C. Houston Goudiss

The reason why some men and women in their middle years look and feel younger today than their parents did at the same age, is because they have learned something of the importance of caring properly for their teeth. In recent years, dentists have discovered that sound teeth are in truth a passport to good health, and that there is as close a relationship between healthy teeth and healthy bodies as between decayed teeth and sickly bodies.

Unfortunately, however, only a small percentage of our population is yet aware of the far-reaching effects of teeth upon health, and a distinguished scientist is so disturbed over our national ignorance in this respect that he has said that unless this trend is reversed, the course of human evolution will lead downward to extinction. That statement is no exaggeration. For it would be difficult to over-estimate the influence of the teeth on human health and happiness.

For many years I have endeavored to explain that a neglected tooth—which soon becomes a decayed tooth—is a poison factory, distributing its noxious products to every part of the body, and that it may lead indirectly to neuritis, rheumatic ailments, dyspepsia, and other obscure complaints.

In many of the "WHAT TO EAT AND WHY" articles, which have appeared in this newspaper over my signature, I have endeavored to point out the close relationship between diet and dental disease; between frequent and thorough brushing of the teeth with an efficient dentifrice so as to remove all food particles, and strong, beautiful teeth.

As a result of these articles, I have received many letters, showing that homemakers are eager for sound, authoritative advice on the proper care of the teeth. To help these and other readers how to properly care for their teeth, I have prepared a booklet on—"BUILDING AND PLANNING HEALTH" which I am offering FREE, because I feel so strongly that this information should be in every home, knowing as I do, that the salvation of the human race may lie in saving their teeth.

HOUSEHOLD QUESTIONS

Cleaning Enamel Dish.—If an enamel dish has been badly burned, fill it with salt water and put it on the stove to boil. Empty and rub with a cloth. If the burn marks still remain, sprinkle a little salt onto the cloth and rub.

Keep Screens From Rusting.—Window screens, rubbed over with kerosene when they are put away in autumn, will not be found rusted when wanted next summer.

Pads Under Rugs.—According to the U. S. bureau of standards, linings or pads prolong the life of rugs and carpets almost one-half.

Conserve Mineral in Cabbage.—Cooking cabbage in quarters and chopping it later when the sections are tender helps to conserve the valuable minerals contained in this vegetable.

Longer Life to Towels.—Towels will last longer if washed before the dirt and grime become so ground into them that harsh rubbing is necessary to get them clean.

may be provided in the form of easily digested carbohydrates, such as rice, macaroni, spaghetti, noodles, potatoes, cereals and breadstuffs.

In the case of adults, the amount of fats may also be increased and in some circumstances, more sweets may likewise be taken.

To summarize, the cold weather diet should include a quart of milk daily for every child, a pint for each adult; two fruits daily, or one fruit and one fruit juice—and while one serving may be a dried fruit, such as prunes, apricots or figs, there should be one serving of a citrus fruit, or tomatoes; to provide vitamin C; two vegetables besides potatoes, one of which should be of the green, leafy variety, either fresh or canned; an egg daily, or at least three or four weekly; one daily serving of meat, fish or chicken, and a second protein food such as cheese, dried peas or beans or nuts; and enough of the fuel foods including whole grain cereals, to keep the body warm and comfortable.

If you eat correctly and dress sensibly so that you are neither too warmly clad indoors nor too thinly clad out of doors, you can enjoy cold weather and benefit by it to the extent of increased health and happiness.

KNOW YOUR NEWSPAPER

New Model City To Be Shown at New York Fair

NEW YORK (Special)—A magic carpet ride through space two miles above "Democracy," the perfectly integrated garden city of tomorrow, will feature the central theme exhibit of the New York World's Fair which opens April 30, 1939.

The exhibit, created by Henry Dreyfuss, industrial designer, will be dramatic in form. It will reach a stirring climax when, out of the distant skies above the floating audience, will trudge marching legions of workers, symbolizing the interdependence of man in modern civilization.

Nearer and nearer they will tramp, until the whole arch of heaven is filled with towering figures, arms up-raised, singing the song of tomorrow. As the final strains of this marching air die away, great streamers of colored light shoot forth from the zenith, drenching the sky from horizon to horizon in all the hues of the rainbow.

A Dramatic Show

This dramatic show will be housed in the eighteen-story Perisphere, companion structure to the 700-foot Trylon, which constitute the architectural focus of the Fair.

An entirely new method of projection, utilizing slides instead of film, will be employed to throw the moving figures on the sky. New methods of fluorescent lighting will be used.

The garden city itself will be a model—one of the largest ever built and the first to portray a full-size metropolis catering to a million people and complete in every last detail. This city of tomorrow will serve 1,000,000 people, but no one will live in it. Homes will be in suburban developments. Factories also will be located in satellite towns, and broad green belt areas will circle both city and towns.

Model City Possible

City planners, engineers, architects, landscape architects, airport specialists and other experts collaborated on the design of "Democracy," and so accurate is the model that, according to Mr. Dreyfuss, it could be given concrete reality today were sufficient funds made available. Blueprint drawings have been made not only of street layouts, harbors, airports, athletic fields and civic centers but of traffic and pedestrian over-passes, theatres, hospitals, shops, bridges, dams and apartments.

The entrance to the theme exhibit will be high up on the side of the Perisphere fifty feet above the ground. Access will be by means of the two longest moving stairways ever built in this country. Visitors will enter on two levels and step on to two magic carpets or revolving platforms placed one above the other and moving in opposite directions.

Red Cross Seeks Cut In Accident Toll

1,725,406 First Aiders Trained Since 1910

Cognizant of tremendous losses in human lives and of permanent injuries resulting from accidents in homes, on farms and highways, and around industrial plants as well as in the basement workshop, officials of the American Red Cross have been directing a systematic fight against what they term "this economic waste."

As part of this nation-wide effort to reduce deaths and permanent injuries from accidents, a recent statement from Red Cross headquarters in Washington reports that during the past 12 months certificates have been granted to 295,028 persons completing courses in the administration of Red Cross first aid.

Holders of these certificates have followed detailed courses of study and have been taught how to splint fractured limbs, stop flow of blood, treat poison sufferers, care for victims of heat, electric shock, and handle other common emergency situations. The courses emphasize methods of caring for patients until professional medical aid can be summoned to scenes of accidents.

Since 1910, the report reveals, 1,725,406 persons have received this training from qualified Red Cross instructors, and at the present time 20,429 persons are qualified to give such instruction.

Bringing help nearer scenes of possible accident, 2,454 emergency first aid stations have been established in strategic locations on principal highways throughout the nation, operators of the stations receiving the prescribed Red Cross instructions and maintaining full first aid equipment on the spot.

Fearful of Cholera

Ohio pioneers were so fearful of cholera that many of them would put strong coverings around the coffins of victims to prevent the germs spreading from inside the ground. They covered the coffins with leather, rawhide and other such materials.

Shadows Full of Color

Shadows that the casual observer thinks of as just gray or black in a painting will be revealed, on close examination, to be full of color, sometimes quite bright.

Henry Koerner Turns Surplus Into The Till

Starting out four years ago with practically no funds with which to operate the office, Henry Koerner, candidate for a second term as county clerk, conducted its affairs so efficiently and so economically that he now reports a surplus of more than $3,200, turned in to the County Treasurer, according to the reports on file with the board of Supervisors.

Had Mr. Koerner chosen to bill the County Board for all the fees for County Work that he has done, his surplus earnings would have totaled more than $135,000, a nice showing to the taxpayers but at their expense. It would have been like a wife giving her husband an expensive Christmas gift and then have the storekeeper send him the bill. Rather than add to the taxpayers' bill, Mr. Koerner did the work without fee.

"The head of a private business endeavors to save and make money for his stockholders," Mr. Koerner says. "The head of a public office has the same obligation to his stockholders—the taxpayers." He has met this obligation to the best of his ability and you may be assured that he will continue to meet it if it is good fortune to be re-elected.

Mr. Koerner is busy now preparing for the general election Nov. 8, as it is his duty to have the ballots printed, instruct the judges and clerks in their duties, distribute the supplies and canvass the returns. This is just one of the many duties of the county clerk. He acts as clerk of the election court, the board of supervisors, extends taxes, prepares the books for the assessors, handles cases involving the adoption and welfare of children, care of the blind and the keeping of many and important records.

Mr. Koerner, a native of Wilton township, once served as Highway Commissioner of Manhattan and was president of the school board in that community. His friends urge his re-election as County Clerk on the basis of his excellent record in that office.

Whose Money Is Being Promised?

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

As every voter knows, something new and foreign to the American tradition has made its way into campaign oratory during recent years.

It is the promise of large and regular grants of money, not necessarily to the unemployed or others in need, but to members of various groups and factions whose votes can help win victory.

In an earlier day, candidates pledged themselves to work for improved conditions for all their constituents; for governmental processes which would offer every citizen greater opportunity to advance and to prosper.

And under that method America rose in achievement and in the general well-being of its people to heights approached by no other nation in history.

But today many candidates seem to favor a different technique. This method is to promise to put money directly into the pockets of special groups of voters, regardless of its effect on the nation as a whole. And in making these promises such candidates bask in a self-created glow of personal generosity.

But who is being generous? That depends on where the money comes from. And, as everybody knows, it must come from the people. Today, as always, their earnings and their savings are the source of all government income.

In other words, what such candidates are promising is to give to the people money which they, the people, must supply, either through direct taxes or in the form of higher costs for all the necessities of life—now or in the future.

Every citizen recognizes the responsibility, through government or other sources, to help those in need. But when a candidate asks for election on his promise that he will give the voters money which they must supply, he is asking them not to help the nation or themselves, but to help him.
